

LOVE FOR FIRES ENDS REAL LOVE OF BRONX WIFE

Mrs. Kuntz Says Husband's Desire to Fight
Flames Parted Them.

HE RODE ON ENGINES.

Man in the Case Is Highly Esteemed and Member of a Prominent Family.

Across the way from the cozy cottage at One Hundred and Sixty-eighth street and Fulton avenue, the Bronx, the fire engine clangs in the quarters of Engine Company No. 42. The hoof-beats of the romping horses, the rattle of equipment, and the hoarse cries of the firemen are carried over to the cottage.

The door of the cottage is flung open, and a man jumps down the long flight of steps, three steps at a jump. His eyes are ablaze with excitement. He dashes across the street, swings aboard the tender as it joins in the chase of the on-rushing engine, and is quickly lost to view.

"I used to gaze after him, fearing he would be killed," a dark-eyed, comely woman who lives in the cottage, said today. She is Mrs. Rosa Kuntz, and she has brought suit for separation from her husband, Joseph A. Kuntz.

"He must pay for his rides now. He was mad, mad after fires. He neglected his business to go to fires. For love of them he forgot his wife, his children and his home. He lost his work, and since he cannot provide for us I am suing him for a separation for non-support."

Kuntz Highly Esteemed.

Joseph A. Kuntz, member of a prominent Bronx family of that name, is known throughout the neighborhood because of his strange fancy for fires. He is highly esteemed, of temperate habits, and a worthy grandson of the late Michael Kuntz, who established and made a fortune out of the old Kuntz Brewery many years ago. In her complaint Mrs. Kuntz says:

"During the last four years, even if he was awakened from his sleep by the fire bells in the fire house opposite his residence, he would get up immediately and go to the fire and remain there, no matter how long they lasted. By reason of this the plaintiff has been annoyed time and again, and deprived of her sleep."

Mrs. Kuntz told a World reporter last night that she had sought earnestly to cure her husband of his fancy. It was no use.

"It did not matter whether it was night or day, if the fire-bell sounded, Mrs. Kuntz said, 'It is night he would jump out of bed. He could hear the preparation being made to respond to the alarm, and figured his chances of catching a ride on the tender. Sometimes he was able to get into his clothes; other times he ran out of the house without many clothes on, but he always went to the fire."

"Many is the occasion I have been awakened out of a sound sleep. The children—we have four, three girls and a boy—would be terrified by the racket their father made at dead of night. We have frequently waited until morning for his return. If the alarm sounded in the daytime, when the children were playing in front of the house, they would come running into the house, crying that papa was aboard the fire engine and would be killed.

"When Capt. Barry was in command of Company 42, I complained to him of my husband's conduct, and told him that unless he put a stop to Mr. Kuntz riding on the engine or tender I would appeal to the authorities. This had beneficial effect for a time, but then my husband would climb aboard the fire apparatus without Capt. Barry knowing it."

Kuntz had a rubber helmet, coat and boots, and was a valiant fireman. He would grasp the hose and lead the way into the most perilous places at a fire. Mrs. Kuntz says she observed the fondness for fire fighting in her husband almost from the date of their marriage sixteen years ago.

Kuntz is living with his mother at No. 1233 Fulton avenue. He said last night that he had abandoned his practice of following the fire engines some time ago, and would contest his wife's suit for separation.

"I have always provided well for my family until recently, when I lost my work," he said. "I prevailed upon my grandfather, Michael Kuntz, to change his will, and bequeath to my wife $10,000. She received this legacy on his death. I also decided to her the house in which she lives. She also received considerable property on the death of her father."

Asked concerning his activities at fires, when he was not a member of the Fire Department, he replied:

"I cannot discuss that. It might get members of the department into trouble."

"I cannot discuss that. It might get members of the department into trouble."
